ABOUT THE

Reproductive rights involve a broad range of socio-economic, political, economic, safe health rights and non-discriminatory gender rights. Women's reproductive health should be prioritized as they are responsible for shaping a better tomorrow by giving birth to healthy individuals. Reproductive rights began to be framed as a part of human rights from the United Nation's International Conference on Human Rights (1968). World Health Organisation (WHO 2009) rightly explicates the reproductive rights as:

“Reproductive rights rest on the recognition of the basic right of all couples and individuals to decide freely and responsibly the number, spacing and timing of their children and to have information to do so, and right to attain the highest standard of sexual and reproductive health. They also include the right of all to make decisions concerning reproduction free of discrimination, coercion and violence”

As per census 2011 of India, the youth population (15-24 age) accounts 20% of the total population and expected to share 35% by 2020. Lack of knowledge and awareness of sexual and reproductive health among youth increases the chances of sexually transmitted diseases (STDs), unplanned pregnancy and unsafe abortions. Although, in India, maternal mortality ratio (MMR) for 15-39 age group, has reduced to 77% with 556 in 1990 to 130 per lakh live birth in 2016. But still, approximately 2.4 million are infected with HIV/AIDS with 40% women. Also, one third of abortions related with unplanned pregnancies with mostly adolescents.

This seminar aims to provide an important platform for researchers, academicians and students to aware youth population about their reproductive rights, issues and challenges and to discuss the solutions to deal with related themes. The target group of the seminar includes professionals, academicians, students & research scholars from various disciplines. This seminar will provide an opportunity for the participants to equip them with the necessary knowledge, attitude, and skills to become mature and socially responsible individuals.
